I understand the Metal Shop's classroom cell phone policy.

I understand the academic challenges of this course. I understand that there might be homework and that out-of-class work time will be essential in order to succeed.

I promise to use my in-class studio time to do WORK. I will use my time and material resources as productively as possible.

I promise to NEVER put down myself, my work, or the work of others. I understand that the metal shop is a safe place.. I promise to regard my less successful projects as a learning experience, never as a failure.

I understand that critical analysis is necessary for growth, and I understand the difference between a put-down and a critique. Put-downs are negative comments with the intention of belittling. Critiques are analysis with the intention of building people up and helping them improve their skills.
